JANESVILLE, WISCONSIN, MONDAY, FEBRUARY 1, 1909.

ANOTHER VOTE TUESDAY NOON

Legislature Will Have Joint Session Again
Tomorrow To Ballot For United States Senator.

STEPHENSON MAY WIN THE CONTEST

His Expense Account Will Be Filed During The Present
Week--Said To Show Expenditure Of Trifle
Over Hundred Thousand.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Madison, Wis., Feb. 1.—The Stephenson forces will make a supreme effort on Tuesday to accomplish the election. If they fail it is doubtful if there will be any election until the investigation committee has been appointed and has completed its task.

The senatorial contest has overshadowed all other matters of legislation this week. Although but one week remains for the introduction of bills, it is probable now that the time will have to be extended as the many of the measures have not been drafted and less than 300 bills have come into the assembly and about sixty in the senate.

At the 1907 session of the legislature 1,045 assembly bills and 640 senate bills were introduced. The delay in presenting the bills at this session is not attributed to the fact that there are fewer matters upon which the members wish to legislate, but rather that the senatorial contest has kept many members from "getting busy" with legislative matters.

Since the opening of the senatorial contest Senator Stephenson has made few gains. On Tuesday, he received 72 votes, counting the separate ballots in each house; on Wednesday 65; on Thursday, 60; and on Friday only 63, losing the votes of Assemblymen Towers, Leach and Simon Smith.

Members of the legislature are now discussing the possible composition of a committee to investigate the expense account of Senator Stephenson.

It now seems to be the general opinion that no democratic member who has taken an active interest either way in the matter of ordering an investigation.

It is now certain there will be an investigation and the members are discussing the possibilities of what the character of the evidence will be. Senator Stephenson's expense account, which will be filed probably next week, or at the latest, the week after, will show an expenditure of approximately $107,000.

This information was given by one of Stephenson's campaign managers, who assisted in the conduct of the primary campaign. This man said if Senator Stephenson were elected on Tuesday he would file his expense account during the week, but if not, it would be delayed in filing until the week after.

It is reported here on good authority that J. H. Puckett, of Milwaukee, an associate in business with Senator Stephenson, went to Washington, Thursday, to confer with the senator on certain of the items, and upon his return the account will be ready for filing.

The senator takes the position that he was elected on last Tuesday, the day the separate ballots in each house gave him a total of 72 votes. The law allows him thirty days to file, but he will put it in, to indicate that he considers his education over. As interpreted by the attorney general, he is not compelled to file until after his election.

The first indication that Senator Stephenson was about to file his expenses was given in the assembly Friday, when Assemblyman Hull introduced a resolution requesting the senator to file.

This was taken as an indication as paving the way and to give some of the members of the assembly an opportunity to express their views as to what would be their attitude if the account were filed.

While the resolution failed, because it was pointed out that it was in conflict with the statutes, it served its purpose in having the matter brought before the members.

health when she left her home for the school. LIMIT CONVOYS OF SEA-GOING BARGES

New Regulations Proposed by Dept. of Commerce and Labor Will Also Cover Lake Navigation.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Washington, D. C., Feb. 1.—New regulations devised by the department of commerce and labor to limit the length of convoys of sea-going barges became effective today. The regulations were adopted after long negotiation and investigation of the question. For a number of years the mariners have complained of the danger to navigation arising from the excessively long convoys along the coast and in the harbors.

The new rules prescribe that barges towing the inland waters of the United States shall not exceed four vessels tandem, including the tug, and that hawsers shall not run to a length greater than seventy-five fathoms. The total length of the tow, therefore, cannot exceed about 2,000 feet. Provision is made also for bunching the tow on entering New York, Boston and other harbors along the Atlantic coast.

Some discussion has been caused by the limitation of hawsers between the tow and the tug. Two hundred feet has not been unusual in practice, and the length as a rule has run from 125 feet up. The regulations provide, however, for lengthening the tow in case of bad weather, and outside of the harbors probably no difficulty will be experienced in complying with the law.

BRAZEAU PLANS FOR MANY BILLS

GRAND RAPIDS MAN MUCH INTER-ESTED IN THE QUESTION OF
Thoroughly.

INDUSTRIAL INSURANCE

Takes the Matter Up in Detail And Goes into the Question Most Thoroughly.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Madison, Wis., Feb. 1.—Senator T. W. Brazeau of Grand Rapids will introduce two bills on industrial insurance in the legislature next week. One provides for compulsory insurance of all employees and the other makes it optional, the same as the bill recently defeated in Illinois. The first plan is far the more important and is the one which will doubtless be developed, enlarged upon and urged for passage. This is the largest subject of legislation for the session.

It provides for the creation of an "Industrial Insurance Commission of Wisconsin" to be composed of three members appointed by the governor and confirmed by the senate. One shall be a physician and surgeon, the second shall be an attorney of recognized ability and the third shall have a general knowledge of industrial insurance. The salary of each is $5,000 annually.

The plan of general legal organization of the commission are similar to those of the railroad commission. It makes it compulsory for any employer engaged in a dangerous industry to obtain a certificate of the commission, and pay a certain amount to the fund. In return it insures him against damage suits for accidents, but makes it possible for any person injured to receive compensation in some form, regardless of the negligence of himself or the employer. In a word it practically wipes the subject of contributory negligence off the statute books of the state.

Any employer engaged in a dangerous or hazardous occupation, named in the act and to be supplemented by the knowledge and rules of the commission, must apply to the commission for a certificate to safeguard him and his employees against accidents. Failure to obtain a certificate subjects the employer to an annual fine of $5 for each person employed.

Requirements of Law.
The employer may obtain a certificate from the commission by agreeing to one of four requirements: First, any employer of more than 1,000 men may establish his own fund to pay for industrial accidents in his own plant. His system must receive the approval of the commission, however.

Second, he may be a member of any number of recognized industrial insurance companies, approved by the commission.

Third, he may take out industrial insurance in reputable insurance companies for his employees.

Fourth, he may pay a certain stipulated amount to each person employed in a state fund that will make payments for all accidents and deaths occurring in his plant.

If the employer contributes alone to the fund of the state in proportion to the number of persons employed, will receive a "single benefit" if the employee chooses to contribute a part of his wages, also, in case of accident, this employee is entitled to a "double benefit," which in case he is injured the amount paid in case he is injured and only the employer has contributed to the state industrial insurance fund.

Classification of Occupations.
The occupations are to be classified by this commission and the rates of insurance to be paid regulated accordingly. The rates shall be practically the same as paid to industrial insurance companies, and shall never exceed the rate by 25 per cent.

Under the "single-benefit" clause, in case of accident, the state fund pays first medical aid, and in case of death a funeral expense not to exceed $100. If there is a widow, or persons wholly dependent upon the deceased, they receive a sum payable monthly for a period of five years, not to exceed one-half of the wages of the deceased employee. The county judge shall have the power, however, to order the complete payment of the whole sum at one time. The clause is to permit the payment of mortgages on homes.

If the person injured is wholly incapacitated he shall receive a certain percentage of his regular wages, to be determined by the commission in proportion to those dependent upon him for support. In the case of death, if no one is dependent upon him, the funeral expenses are paid only.

Right of Appeal.
If the person injured is only partially incapacitated, after the second week, he shall receive one-half of his wages for a period not to exceed two years. The commission is to determine upon satisfactory latitude to determine upon the "degree of incapacity

LAYMAN'S MOVEMENT CLOSES WITH SUNDAY'S MEETINGS

IS GIVEN FREE HAND

Jerome May Start Libel Suit for Douglas Robinson.

GOVERNMENT WILL AID HIM

District Attorney Stimson, however, intimates that case in behalf of former war secretary may be handled by Uncle Sam.

New York, Feb. 1.—District Attorney Jerome is given a free hand and encouragement to proceed in the libel matter by United States District Attorney Stimson, who last night made public his reply to Mr. Jerome's letter in relation to bringing action against the New York World.

Mr. Stimson tells Mr. Jerome to go ahead and assures him "that such action on your part will in no wise be regarded as an interference, but, on the contrary, we shall regard it as our duty to co-operate with you in all proper and lawful ways."

May Say Taft was Libeled.
It is apparent from the wording of the letter that while the federal authorities concede to Mr. Jerome the right to appear as the protector of Douglas Robinson's good name, they reserve to themselves the privilege of acting in defense of the reputation of "a gentleman who occupied the position of head of the war department" in any federal jurisdiction where the case applies.

The reference to the "gentleman who occupied the position of head of the war department" is taken to mean President-elect Taft, who was secretary of war at the time of the Panama canal purchase and is the first intimation that the government may allege that he is the person who has been libeled through the article complained of.

Mr. Stimson's letter is as follows: "My Dear Sir: I have received your letter of January 20, and have given it careful attention. The series of publications in the New York World, to which you refer, have for some time been under my consideration. These publications, which I concur with you in considering libelous, appear to have been circulated by the newspaper in question in a number of distinct and independent jurisdictions and to contain charges reflecting upon the personal character of a number of men, of whom some are in public life and some are private citizens. In each of these jurisdictions, under well-known principles of law, each of these publications would constitute a separate offense, and as it happens in this case, each one is characterized by distinct and peculiar features.

"Your letter makes clear the offense against the laws of New York state, constituted by the attack upon the reputation of Mr. Robinson, circulated among his friends and neighbors in New York county. The circulation of similar charges of personal corruption or dishonesty against a gentleman who occupied the position of head of the war department, among the officers and men of the army resident upon the military reservations in my district, or among the residents of the District of Columbia, where the war department is situated, may well engage the attention of the officials whose duty it is to enforce the law in those localities.

Promises His Co-Operation.
"In answer, therefore, to your query as to whether a prosecution on your part as to the alleged libel of October 3 upon Mr. Robinson, would be regarded as an unwelcome interference with a matter over which the federal courts have jurisdiction, and in which action has already been taken by the federal authorities, I beg to assure you that such action on your part will in no wise be regarded as such an interference, but, on the contrary, we shall regard it as our duty to co-operate with you in all proper and lawful ways.

"You may, therefore, be assured of my cordial co-operation in bringing to light all facts relating to this transaction, and I am happy to offer you access to all sources of information on this subject under my official control. In the same way I should be very glad to be furnished by you with any evidence which your investigations upon the subject may disclose. Very respectfully yours, Henry L. Stimson, U. S. Attorney."

ROOSEVELT TO SPEAK AT LINCOLN'S HOME

Will Lay Memorial Hall Corner-Stone at Hodgenville, Ky., Martyred President's Birthplace.

Louisville, Ky., Feb. 1.—Thousands of persons will be disappointed in their plans to attend the exercises commemorating the centenary of Lincoln's birth near Hodgenville, Ky., on February 12, for the audience will be limited to the capacity of a great tent that is to be erected.

Though President Theodore Roosevelt, Cardinal Gibbons, Bishop Galloway, former Gov. Folk and other men of national importance are scheduled to make addresses not by any means will all of those who wish to attend the dedication be able to be present.

In February, roads leading from Hodgenville to the farm where Lincoln was born are not like the Appian Way, and the short period during which work has been done on the farm site has provided no shelter large enough to accommodate a throng. The Lincoln committee of Kentucky, therefore, working with the committee of the Lincoln Farm association has bought a tent to hold about 4,000 persons and in the center of this the address will be made and the corner-stone of the memorial hall be laid by the president.

The program thus far includes the dedicatory address of Mr. Roosevelt; address by Gov. Folk as head of the farm association; Gov. Augustus E. Wilson, on behalf of Kentucky; Gen. James E. Wilson, for the soldiers of the union, and Gen. Luke E. Wright, secretary of war, for the soldiers of the confederacy.

Bishop Galloway will pronounce the benediction and Cardinal Gibbons the invocation.

Four trains will be run to Hodgenville out of Louisville on the day, the third of which with a five-minute stop in this city will bear President Roosevelt, who returns to Washington that night.

FIRE DESTROYS MILTON, FLA.

Entire Business Section Burned, Loss Being Nearly $200,000.

Panama City, Fla., Feb. 1.—The town of Milton, 30 miles east of Panama, was practically wiped off the map by fire yesterday, the entire business section and several residences being destroyed. The total loss is estimated at between $150,000 and $200,000.

The two banks, the city hall, Waldorf hotel, Santa Rosa star building, two livery stables and a dozen stores were destroyed. The building of the First National bank has just been completed at a cost of $35,000. A strong northwest wind fanned the flames, and soon the business houses had been consumed. The fire was making progress in the residence district when a special train with Panama fire fighters reached the scene.

TOBACCO REPORT ISSUED.

Kentucky, Indiana and Illinois Depended Upon for Supply.

Washington, Feb. 1.—Tobacco consumers over a great part of the world will continue to look, as they have for some time past, to Kentucky and the bordering states for their supply of the fragrant weed, according to a bulletin issued by the department of agriculture on the cultivation of tobacco in Kentucky and Tennessee. Kentucky and the bordering states produce annually 370,647,000 pounds of tobacco. The dark tobacco district, including Kentucky, part of western Tennessee, a small area of Missouri, southern Illinois and southwestern Indiana, produces a dark, heavy type, which is principally exported to European countries.

CALLS LABOR MEET

Commissioner Keefe Summons Leaders to Capital.

TO AID THE WORKINGMAN

Samuel Gompers is Among Those Invited to Attend a Council for the Promotion of Welfare of Nation's Tollers.

Washington, Feb. 1.—Plans for the big council of labor to be held here February 10 are being perfected, and invitations have been sent to more than twenty labor leaders to come to the department of commerce and labor and participate in the discussion of questions bearing on the welfare of wage-earners.

It is the earnest hope of those who will attend this conference that some plan or plans may be evolved which will promote the welfare of the wage-workers. The subjects with which the conference will be called upon to deal are indicated in the invitations which have been addressed to the heads of the principal labor organizations by Daniel J. Keefe, commissioner general of immigration, who was designated by Secretary Strauss as one of the committee on arrangements.

To Discuss Unemployed Question.

The problem of the unemployed, and how and to what extent the division of information, in the department of commerce and labor, can be most helpful to that class, especially during periods of depression, is perhaps of chief significance.

It is declared that immigration figures indicate that much of the immigrant influx to the United States is due to misleading information as to labor conditions here, and this will form one of the chief topics to be threshed out. The conference also will consider "how the Nobel peace prize which President Roosevelt devoted to the foundation for the promotion of industrial peace can be made most effective."

Other questions which will figure in the council's deliberations will be as to the advisability of recommendations for legislation extending the steamboat inspection service to include the inspection of locomotive boilers on interstate railroads, and how the division of information of the department of commerce and labor may be administered for the best interest of the wage-earners generally.

Gompers Gets Invitation.

The invitations have been sent to the following: Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor; W. G. Len, Cleveland, O., grand master of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen; Warren S. Stone, Cleveland, O., grand chief Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers; W. S. Carter of Peoria, Ill., grand master of Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen; A. H. Garretson of Cedar Rapids, Ia., grand chief Order of Railway Conductors; Frank T. Hawley, Buffalo, N. Y., president Switchmen's Union of North America; W. E. Yates of New York city, president Marine Engineers' Beneficial association; Andrew Furuseth of San Francisco, president Seamen's International union; T. J. Dolan, Chicago; general secretary International Association of Steam Shovel and Dredge Men; T. L. Lewis of Indianapolis, Ind., president United Mine Workers; George W. Perkins, Chicago, president Cigar Makers' International union; T. V. O'Connor of Detroit, Mich., president International Longshoremen's association; James M. Lynch of Indianapolis, Ind., president International Typographical union; W. D. Mahon of Detroit, Mich., president Amalgamated Association Street Railway Employees; Timothy Healy of New York city, president International Brotherhood of Stationary Firemen, and others.

LOST STEAMER UNKNOWN.

Vessel Sunk on Diamond Shoals May Have Been Derelict.

Norfolk, Va., Feb. 1.—Hidden beneath the turbulent waves that roll wildly over Diamond shoals, 14 miles off Cape Hatteras, N. C., the secret of the identity of the mysterious steamer which went down there Saturday, probably with all hands on board, remains untold. The daylight of another day gave no evidence, furnished no clue to corroborate the testimony of those few aboard the Diamond shoals lightship, who witnessed, helpless to aid, this latest tragedy of the well named "Graveyard of the Atlantic."

A message from Keeper Styron of the Durant life saving station at Hatteras, says no details are known in that locality of steamer foundering. No wreckage had drifted up there and none was seen from the shore.

Norfolk shipping authorities declare that the steamer probably was an abandoned derelict.

Socialists and Police Clash.

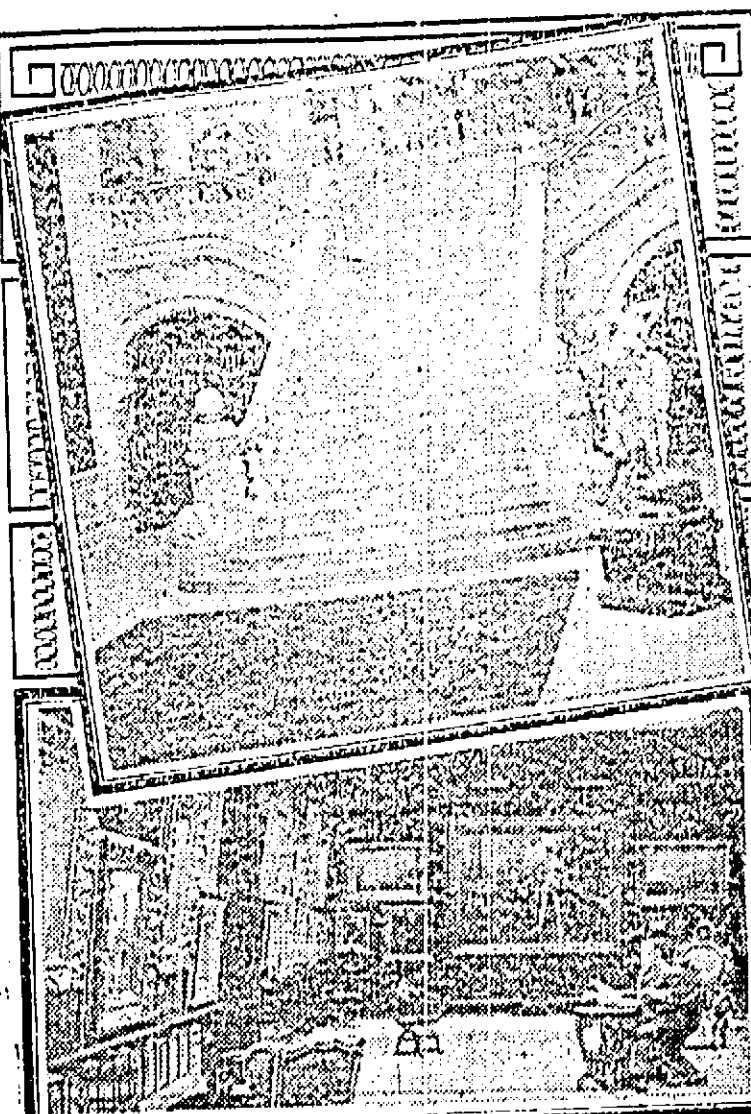

Hannover, Germany, Feb. 1.—Socialist demonstrations held here yesterday in protest against the Prussian election laws resulted in a collision between the Socialists and the police. The police used their side arms against the demonstrators and in the fighting between twenty and thirty persons were wounded. The police also made numerous arrests.

Constantinople, Feb. 1.—The grand vizier, Kiamil Pasha, has dispatched to Sofia an energetic note demanding to know definitely whether Bulgaria intends to resume negotiations.

YERKES ART GALLERY, WHICH IS SOON TO BE UNDER THE HAMMER.

Picture at top shows the grand staircase, with rug in the foreground which cost $60,000. In the center is shown a corner of the Yerkes gallery with its magnificent pictures and valuable frames. Below is the bed which once belonged to a Bavarian king. This was purchased for the trivial sum of $47,000.

New York City.—With the passing of the Yerkes art gallery under the hammer, one of the most interesting and instructive art collections in the United States will undoubtedly be scattered to various art centers outside of New York. The collection has been gathered together at immense expense and the selling of this under the hammer will in no way bring back to the state any small portion of the money expended. It is unfortunate that New York should lose this long-to grant a reputation for itself.

Phyllis—Yes, but he proposed while, strapping on my skates and his knees were on the ice 15 minutes.

SHE'LL GET ALONG.

"More than a year ago," said the insurance man, "I received a letter from a person in one of the Western states which said that the writer was a widow and asked for a little financial assistance. She wasn't very greedy, but would let me off with a dollar. I showed the letter into a policeman and paid no more attention to it. Next week another came. Then a third and a fourth, and on a matter of fact one came for each week in the year until I had 52 of them. The widow had spent $1.04 in her efforts to obtain a dollar from me. I thought such persistence deserved an answer of some sort, and so I wrote her:

"All your letters received. I send you the dollar, asked for, but can't you figure that you are still four cents out?"

"As promptly as it she had been a business man closing up a $10,000 deal, she replied:

"Thanks, No, I can't figure that way. As I begged my stationery and stamps from the neighbors I was just $1.00 in pocket in your case."

"I have always had a tender heart for widows," smiled the insurance man, "but in this case I don't think there is any call for my sympathy. If her neighbors have held out she'll be wearing a coal-skin-sack this winter."

PAINLESS DENTISTRY.

A Deloit party dropped in the other day, and on leaving the office, he said, "Dr. Richards, I came all the way from Deloit to try you. I've heard of your painless work, and thought that if there was anybody that could save me from so much suffering, I was going to see him at once."

"Well," said I, "How is it? Are you satisfied with my work?"

"Entirely," said he. "You have not hurt me at all, and I thank you heartily for your carelessness."

So it goes almost every day. I never was able to do away with as much of the pain of Dentistry as I am now doing continually.

MAYOR HEDDLES NOT A CANDIDATE

STATES HE WILL NOT SEEK RE-NOMINATION AS MAYOR AT PRIMARIES.

ANNOUNCES HIS INTENTIONS

Of Withdrawing from the Race, Leaving the Republican Nomination Open to Others.

Mayor Stewart H. Heddles this afternoon formally announced that he will not be a candidate for re-nomination and election at the republican primaries that will be held March 23. Mr. Heddles has been repeatedly urged to allow his name to be used in connection with a second term, but until today has not made any definite statement relative to the matter. Mr. Heddles authorized the publication of the following announcement, which leaves the field open to other aspirants for office.

"As the time for the spring primaries approaches I feel that it is due my many friends in the city to announce that I have determined not to become a candidate for re-nomination for the office of Mayor.

"During my two years as chief executive of the city I have had the support and counsel of gentlemen who have supported me two years ago, many of whom have urged me to again become a candidate. In justice to them, I feel that I should at this time announce my intentions.

"I desire to thank the gentlemen who have so steadfastly supported me during my tenure of office and take this opportunity of also thanking the voters of the city who elected me to this office I now hold.

"I make this announcement at this time so that others who may desire to place their names for nomination may have plenty of opportunity to arrange their plans of campaign, my withdrawal from the possibility of becoming a candidate leaving them free to act."

Mr. Heddles' withdrawal will be the opening gun of the spring campaign and already several candidates are planning themselves to announce their intentions within the next few days.

HAD AN EXPERIENCE IN BIG SNOW DRIFTS

Joseph and Michael Hayes, Jr., Were on Railroad Train Lost in Minnesota Wilds.

Joseph and Michael Hayes, Jr., reached Janesville this morning after an exciting fifty-two hours' delay on their trip from Bellefourche, S. Dak., owing to the big snow drifts in northern Minnesota. They, however, appeared to regard the affair as a joke and laughed over their experience. The train they were on ran into a drift about twenty-five feet deep near Brookings, Minn., and finding it impossible to proceed backed into Brookings where they waited fifty-two hours before being able to get away.

The trip and the wait the boys do not regard as a misfortune because there really was no suffering caused. Only one night did the storm trouble them at all and that was the first night when the storm blew the snow through the windows so that the next morning the cars were almost filled with the fine white stuff.

At Pierre, S. D., there was more snow. As some places along the track they saw drifts of from twenty to thirty feet and at Sanborn, South Dakota, the drifts were even with the top of the depot. Their train was the first to come into LaCrosse since last Thursday.

The rain before the storm caused the snow to crust over like ice which made travelling very difficult. Telegraph poles were broken off like toothpicks and communication could be had in no direction. Fifty or sixty feet of the poles in succession would be laid flat on the snow.

On the day preceding the storm, in Bellefourche, there was a high wind blowing, so strong that it lifted baggage from the wagon bed, and broke it up.

The complaints of the passengers and their growliness during the long wait caused the boys considerable amusement. Officers of the company composing the passengers complained of the way in which they were being treated by the company and vowed to sue the railway for their trouble.

They, however, appeared to regard the affair as a joke and laughed over their experience. The train they were on ran into a drift about twenty-five feet deep near Brookings, Minn., and finding it impossible to proceed backed into Brookings where they waited fifty-two hours before being able to get away.

The trip and the wait the boys do not regard as a misfortune because there really was no suffering caused. Only one night did the storm trouble them at all and that was the first night when the storm blew the snow through the windows so that the next morning the cars were almost filled with the fine white stuff.

At Pierre, S. D., there was more snow. As some places along the track they saw drifts of from twenty to thirty feet and at Sanborn, South Dakota, the drifts were even with the top of the depot. Their train was the first to come into LaCrosse since last Thursday.

The rain before the storm caused the snow to crust over like ice which made travelling very difficult. Telegraph poles were broken off like toothpicks and communication could be had in no direction. Fifty or sixty feet of the poles in succession would be laid flat on the snow.

On the day preceding the storm, in Bellefourche, there was a high wind blowing, so strong that it lifted baggage from the wagon bed, and broke it up.

The complaints of the passengers and their growliness during the long wait caused the boys considerable amusement. Officers of the company composing the passengers complained of the way in which they were being treated by the company and vowed to sue the railway for their trouble.

WARWICK CASTLE NOW FREE FROM DEBT.

BEAUTIFUL COUNTESS OF WARWICK, WHO HAS RAISED THE FUNDS TO FREE THE ESTATE FROM DEBT.

London.—The beautiful countess of Warwick, by the stroke of business has swept away all the debts of the ancestral Warwick estate, and she and her husband, the earl, are now free from debt for the first time in many years. This brilliant woman in 1899 suggested that they farm the lands and villages and the earl agreed. They were then heavily encumbered.

Stocks were issued in 10-pound shares to a total of 120,000 pounds and first mortgage bonds for 250,000 pounds at 4 per cent, and it is said that either the Rothschilds or W. W. Astor bought most of the securities.

Not long ago the countess was able to sell a big block of South African shares bequeathed to her by the late Cecil Rhodes, and this brought her £200,000, with which she at once bought back all her securities. The property is the only entailed estate in England ever financed in this way.

The countess is now blissfully independent financially, and as she cares no longer to go to court, she has turned her fingers at the critics who reproach her for having such radical Socialist views.

She is still as much of a red revolutionist as ever, and has taken to late to exercising her feudal right of appointing the clergy to the livings on her estate, naming only those who accept the doctrine of Karl Marx without reservation. A Sunday school of her tenants go to show their sympathy with her political ideals, and all by her instruction studiously refuse to go to church.

They have been taught that they owe very little to their social superiors.

Chapter 15

It was pitch dark when Jessica reached the sanatorium, though she went like a whitebird, the dull damp smell of the dusty hallways in her nostrils, the dust rising ghostlike behind the rapid steps. She found David Stiles anxious and peevish over her late coming.

She felt a relief when the old man grew tired and was wheeled to his bedroom.

Left alone, her reflections returned. She began to be tortured. She tried to read. The printed characters swam beyond her comprehension. At length she drew a hood over her head and stole out on to the wide porch.

It was only 8 o'clock, and along the gravel paths that wound among the shrubbery a few dim forms were strolling. She caught the scent of a cigar and the sound of a woman's laugh. The air was crisp and bracing, with a promise of frost and painted leaves. She gazed down across the dark gulches toward the town, a straggling design of yellow and red lights in the darkness, lay the green sheet and the cabin to which her thought returned with a kind of compulsion.

There was no moon, but the stars were glowing like tiny green elf coals, and the yellow road lay plain and clear. With a sudden determination she drew her light cloak closely about her, stepped down, sped across the grass to a footpath and so to the road. As she ran on down the curving stretch under the trees the crackling sly of bank paper that lay in her bosom seemed to burn her flesh. She was stealing away to gaze upon the outcast who had shamed and humbled her—going, she knew not why, with burning cheeks and hammering heart.

She slipped through the side trail to the cabin with a choking sensation. She stole to the window and peered in. In the twilight she could see the form on the bunk, tossing and muttering. Otherwise the place was empty. She lifted the latch softly and entered.

The strained anxiety of Jessica's look relaxed as she gazed about her. She saw the vital on the table. The doctor had been there, then. If he were in serious case, Prondargast would be with him. She threw back her hood, drew one of the chairs to the side of the bunk and sat down, her eyes fixed on his face. The weakness and helplessness of his posture struck through and through her. Two sides of her were struggling in a chaotic combat for mastery.

"I hate you! I hate you!" she said under her breath, clutching her cold hand. "I must hate you! You stole my love and put it under your foot! You have disgraced my present and ruined my future! What if you have forgotten the past—your crime? Does that make you the less guilty or no the less wretched?"

But with a silent yawn within her gave the lie to her vehemence. Some element of her character that had been right and intact was crumbling down. An old sweet something that a dreadful-mill had ground and crushed and annihilated was rising whole and undisturbed, superior to any petty distinction, regardless of all that lifted combative in her inheritance, not to be calmsed or denied.

She leaned closer, listening to the incoherent words and broken phrases borne on the turbid channels of fever. But she could not link them together into meaning. Only one name he spoke clearly over and over again—the name Hugh Stiles—repeated with the dreary monotony of a child counting a lesson. She noted the mark across his brow, before her marriage, in her blindness, she had used to wonder what it was like. It was not in the least disfiguring. It gave a touch of the extraordinary. It was so small she did not wonder that in that ecstatic moment of her bride's kiss she had not seen it.

Slowly, half fearfully, she stretched out her hand and laid it on his. As if at the touch the mutterings ceased.

strong, of the terrible over the h-culture.

A rising flush stained her cheeks. With a sudden impulse and with a guilty backward glance she bent and touched her lips to his forehead.

She drew back quickly, her face flooded with color, caught her breath, then, drawing her hood over her head, went swiftly to the door and was lost in the darkness.

When toward midnight the fever ebbed, Sanderson had fallen into a deep sleep of exhaustion, from which he opened his eyes next morning upon the figure of Prondargast sitting, pipe in mouth, in the sunny doorway.

He lifted himself in his elbow. That crafty face had been luxuriously yawned with the delicious fantasies of his fever. Where and when had he known it? Then in a great tide welled over him the memory of his last conscious hours—the scene in the saloon, the fight, the music, the sudden appalling discovery of his name and repulse. He remembered the sickening wave of self disgust, the fierce agony of resentment that had bent in his every vein as he walked up the darkening street. He remembered the thrown quartz. No doubt another missile had struck home or he had been set upon, kicked and pummeled into insensibility. This old man—a miser probably, for there were picks and shovels in the corner—had saved him. He had been ill, there was no doubt in every limb, and shivering recollections tantalized him. He retained a dim consciousness of a woman's face—the face he had seen on the balcony—leaning near him, bringing into a painful disorder a sense of grateful coolness, of fragrance and of rest.

As he stared again at the seated figure, the grim face reared like a grisly specter, deriding, thrusting its haggard presence upon him. In this little community, which apparently he had forsaken and to which he had by chance returned, he stood a rogue and a scoundrel, a thing to point the finger at and to avoid. The question that had burned his brain to the dazed up again. The town despised him. What had been his career? How had he become a pariah? And by what miracle had he been so altered as to look upon himself with loathing?

He lifted himself upright, dropping his feet to the floor. At the movement the man on the doorstep rose quickly and came forward.

"You're better, Hugh," he said. "Take it easy though. Don't get up just yet—I'm going to cook you some breakfast." He turned to the hearth, kicked the smoldering log ends together and set a saucepan on them. "You'll be stronger when you've got something between your ribs," he added.

"How long have I been lying here?" asked Harry.

"Only since last night. You've had a fever."

"Where is my dog?"

"Dog?" said the other. "I never knew you had one."

Harry's lips set bitterly. It had faded more hardly; then, than he. It had been a ready object for the crowd to wreak their hatred upon, because it belonged to him—because it was Hugh Stiles' dog!

"Is this your cabin, my friend?"

The figure bending over the hearth straightened itself with a jerk, and the blinking yellow eyes looked hard at him. Prondargast came close to the bunk.

"That's the game you played in the town," he said, with a sly answer. "It's all right for those that love to lie, but you needn't try to humbug me, pretending you don't know your own cabin and cabin! I'm no such fool!"

A dull flush came to Harry's brow. Here was a page from that lurid past that faced him. His own cabin! And his own cabin! Well, why not? "You are mistaken," he said calmly. "I am not pretending. I cannot remember you."

Prondargast laughed in an ugly, derisive way. "I suppose you're forgotten the half year we've lived here together and the gold dust we've gathered in now and again—slipped it all, have you?"

Harry stood up. The motion brought a temporary dizziness, but it passed. He walked to the door and gazed out on the pleasant green of the hillside. On a tree near by was nailed a rough, weather beaten board on which was scrawled, "The Little Paymaster Claim." He saw the grass grown gravel trenches, evidence of abandoned work. He had been a miner. That in itself was honest toil.

"The claim is good, then," he said over his shoulder. "We found the pay?"

Prondargast contemplated him a moment in grim silence, with a scowl. "You're either really fuddled, Hugh," he said then, "or else you're a star player actor and up to something deep."

Well, "have" it your own way—it's all the same to me. But you can't pull the wool over my eyes long."

There were mockery and threat in his tone; but, more than both, the evil intimacy in his words gave Harry a qualm of disgust. This man had been his associate. That one hour in the town had shown him what his own life there had been.

What should he do? Forsake forever the neighborhood where he had made his blistering mark? Fling all aside and start again somewhere and leave behind this disgraceful present, with that face that had looked into his from above the dusty street?

If fate intended that, why had it turned him back? If such was the bed he had made, he would lie in it. He would drink the gall and vinegar without whimpering. Whatever lay behind he would live it down. This man at least had befriended him.

He turned into the room. "Perhaps I shall remember after awhile." He took the saucepan from Prondargast's hand. "I'll cook the breakfast," he said. Prondargast filled his pipe and watched him. "I guess there are bats in your belfry, sure enough, Hugh," he said at length. "You never offered to do your stint before."

GIBRALTAR WELCOMES SPERRY'S BATTLESHIPS

Vessels of Other Nations Join in Greeting Americans on Arrival in Harbor.

Gibraltar, Feb. 1.—The first division of the United States Atlantic fleet, composed of the Connecticut, Vermont, Kansas and Minnesota, under command of Rear Admiral Sperry, arrived yesterday from Villefranche. THE OLD AND THE NEW RECORDS OF DISASTERS AT SEA.

The two newspaper clippings above tell more clearly than description the actual advancement made in sea navigation and the protecting of life at sea during the last 20 years. The one clipping on the left is from a paper a few years ago and tells of a disaster at sea in which 500 souls were lost in practically the same manner as the one at the right tells of 561 souls being saved. The contrast speaks advancement. There is no question in the mind of every passenger aboard the ill-fated White Star steamer Republic, which was rammed by the Florida, of the Lloyd's Italian liner last week but that that ship would have gone to the bottom of the sea with every person on board had it not been for two features which mark the great advancement in navigation, namely, the new bulk head and the wireless telegraphy.

HELD FOR TREASON BY THE OFFICIALS

Former Director of Russian Police Is Arrested—Government
Secrets Sold.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 1.—Recent revolutions in Paris made when Axel, head of the fighting Russian revolutionists, was convicted of being in the 'day of the secret police, have had a sensational sequel here in the arrest on a charge of high treason, of M. Lopukine, former director of police in the department of the interior.

The technical accusation is made in a paragraph setting forth that Lopukine was a member of the revolutionary organization.

The actual charge is that he furnished to Curatoff, the leading Russian Socialist revolutionist in Paris, the information on which Axel was denounced, thereby handing over to the government agent to revolutionary vengeance. It is also charged that Lopukine furnished Curatoff with two highly important documents betraying the whole organization of the Russian political police.

His House Thoroughly Searched.

The arrest was made at the demand of the public prosecutor, but the principal incriminating data was gathered from Lopukine's answers to Prosecutor Zaitseff during a search of his house which began at six o'clock in the morning and continued until two in the afternoon. Lopukine then was led to the Viborg political prison. The police searched also the lodgings of M. Skokoff, the official lawyer of the Socialist revolutionists, who represents the party at the big trials and is in close touch with its affairs, as well as the lodgings of two other prominent attorneys, M. Slobin and I. Brawid. M. Skokoff was temporarily put under arrest.

A total of 17 other arrests have been made, including a number of callous at Lopukine's house. The case promises to throw light upon a most interesting chapter concerning the relations between the police and terrorist organizations.

Was Von Plehve's Predecessor.

M. Lopukine was appointed head of the department of police before the time of Von Plehve, although his authority gradually became nominal. After Von Plehve's assassination Lopukine was appointed governor of Livonia. He holds the rank of state councillor.

He is the brother-in-law of Prince Ourasoff and it was from him that Prince Ourasoff obtained the information for his sensational revelations in the first Douma in 1906, when he resigned Gen. Trepoft as "the man higher up," and as such the instigator of the Jewish massacres.

Roosevelt for Square Deal.

Tells California Governor All Allies Should Be Treated Alike.

Sacramento, Cal., Feb. 1.—Gov. Gillett yesterday made public the text of a letter received from President Roosevelt concerning anti-Japanese legislation now pending in the California legislature. President Roosevelt quotes from a letter from former Secretary of State Root to Gov. Gillett and from a memorandum pointing out that Mr. Root saw no objection to a law which treated all allies alike but that to avoid conflict with the constitution such statute should contain an expressed provision excepting from its operations any rights secured by treaty between the United States and foreign nations. Mr. Roosevelt says that this view has his cordial endorsement. "Protests by the Japanese caused the correspondence between the president and governor."

Cold Wave in Southeast.

Atlanta, Ga., Feb. 1.—With the thermometer hovering around 15 degrees above zero since early yesterday morning, previous records were broken in Atlanta, and reports received here indicate that the cold snap was general throughout Georgia, Alabama and Florida. The lowest temperature recorded in Atlanta was 10 above; at Birmingham the coldest was 11 above, at Montgomery 16, and at Mobile 23.

FAMILY THOUGHT TO BE LOST IS FOUND

Manitowoc People Who Suddenly Disappeared Last Fall Have Been Located.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)
Manitowoc, Wis., Feb. 1.—Wenzel Peshik and family, who disappeared from the city Oct. 23 and who could not be located, are residing at Two Creeks, twelve miles north of the city and a daughter is employed as a domestic in the city but knew nothing of the mystery until she read a notice in the daily papers asking information as to whereabouts of the family. The county clerk has also received a notice from the clerk at Two Creeks relative to the family.

Storm Did Much Damage.

Country roads blocked, telegraph and phone wires down and railway service interfered with, the blizzard which set in early yesterday and continued until late last night proved a severe storm. Rural mail delivery carriers had to turn back yesterday, being unable to get through and in the city the roads are drifted and walks in a bad way.

Sentenced for Buying Stolen Goods.

Denied a fine when convicted by a jury after eight hours, Israel Sokolwitz, a Hebrew, must serve five months in jail. Sokolwitz was charged with receiving stolen property from boys implicated in extensive car thefts from the C. & N. W. and admitted that he had secured the grain in the night. He and had represented, in offering it for sale, that he was a farmer, and this was the strongest factor in his conviction. It is probable that further prosecution on the same charge will be made. In all twelve have, now been sentenced in the car theft cases.

Invalid Bride Dies
A bride of one year, during most of which time she was an invalid, Mrs. Joseph Buritz died yesterday. Aged 28, Mrs. Buritz was one of the most popular young ladies in the city. Her parents, husband and one brother and a sister survive.

BRAZEAU PLANS FOR MANY BILLS

The commission by statistical examination may seem to be hazardous, but Senator BrazEAU went to Milwaukee last evening to hold a meeting with the members of the Merchants and Manufacturers' association, to advise with them regarding the provision of the law.

"The introduction of the bill in the senate will give something as a basis upon which work and hearings may be started," said Senator BrazEAU. "It will have to be modified in several particulars, but the hearings will show the defects so we may proceed."

Why?

Why is it that whenever one glances into an undertaker's shop one invariably sees some man sitting in front of a closed desk behind the railing with his feet on the level with his head, apparently gazing into space? This seems to be the favorite attitude affected by our undertaking brethren. Will some kind soul "undertake" to throw a little light upon the subject?

Friends Seized Opportunity.

"How did it happen that your friends got the best of you?" queried the inquisitive person. "They got busy while I was watching my enemies," explained the man who had got the short end of it.

THE DIRECTOIRE GOWNS AND "MERRY WIDOW" OF YEARS AGO.

That "there is nothing new under the sun" is certainly a most applicable saying when used to describe feminine fashions. The Directoire style, for example, which has been hailed as being an idea quite new, is in reality about 110 years old.

The Directoire gowns worn in France near the close of the seventeenth century were very much like those of today, only more so. They were made of thin material, sometimes almost transparent, and but little clothing was worn under them. The idea was to have the gown cling about the figure, giving classic Greek effect. The waist line was high up under the arms; the neck of the gown was cut very low, and there were almost no sleeves.

On the left side, the dress was slit up to above the knee, showing the leg clothed in white, or flesh-colored hose with gold bands for garters. Around the bottom of the dress was a deep border, which heightened the Grecian effect.

In Mrs. Cassel Hooy's translation of the book, "Ten Centuries of Fashion," by A. Reblin, is the following description of the dress: "The fluttering gowns allowed the legs to be seen, and when not split open at the sides, were raised above the knee and fastened with a cameo brooch, boldly displaying the left leg. Very little sleeve was worn, a mere strap, or even no sleeve at all, the edges of the gown being drawn together on the shoulders by bracelets."

With these gauzy gowns no shoes were worn, but sandals, which were bound to the ankles with ribbons, and the feet were decorated with jewels. These sandals were supposed to be very sanitary and helpful footgear, and garbed in this scanty apparel the fashionable women of the time were wont to go out on the streets in all kinds of weather, carrying a gaudy scarf to render some slight protection to their bare shoulders, for the style would not permit the wearing of any kind of cloak.

Up to this time women had been accustomed to having corsets in their dresses, but the scant folds of the sheath gown, as it was sometimes called even then, would not allow this, and so it was that they began to carry handbags. These were hung from the arm, as now, and were called reticules by the women, and "ridiculous" by the men, of the time.

It is curious to note that about five years previous to this a large hat, called the "Widow of Malabar," was worn. Pictures of this hat bear a striking resemblance to the much-talked-of "Merry Widow" hats of last summer. With those large hats, as with those of today, it is necessary to wear much false hair to act as a support, the hats being elaborately trimmed with feathers, ribbon and lace. No history repeats itself, century after century, and the man or woman who can invent a style which can be truthfully new, will be deserving of the name genius.
